

Linda English, Associate Professor:

Linda English received her Ph.D. in American History from the University of Oklahoma in May 2005. She taught as a lecturer at OU and the University of Northern Colorado before her current position: Associate Professor of History at UTRGV (previously UTPA)). Her research and publications focus primarily on race, class, and gender during the late nineteenth century, specifically Texas and Indian Territory. Her articles include “Revealing Accounts: Women’s Lives and General Stores” (The Historian 2002), “Inside the General Store, Inside the Past: A Cultural Analysis of McAlester’s General Store” (The Chronicles of Oklahoma 2003) and “Recording Race: General Stores and Race in the Late Nineteenth-Century Southwest” (Southwestern Historical Quarterly 2006). She also contributed a biographical chapter on Oscar James Dunn in Before Obama: A Reappraisal of Black Reconstruction Era Politicians, titled “‘That is All We Ask for—An Equal Chance:’ Oscar James Dunn, Louisiana’s First Black Lieutenant Governor,” ed. Matthew Lynch (Praeger 2012). Her most recent article is “Southern Reflections: Evolving Attitudes on Race and Region in Indian Territory” (Great Plains Quarterly 2014). In 2013, the University of Oklahoma Press published her book, By All Accounts: General Stores and Community Life in Texas and Indian Territory. Her current research examines the “Runaway Scrape” and other aspects of the Texas Revolution through the lens of gender.
