Additional Info

- Spanish at UTRGV is not just about taking six hours to meet your language proficiency requirements. It's about learning how languages develop, how we interact with other people and cultures, and how we can communicate with each other to change our world for the better.
- Globalization and online communication have intensified contact among cultures and languages. An education in multiple languages is a must in the new millennium, providing students with bilingual and bicultural competencies that set them apart in professional situations.
- Spanish studies also fosters critical and creative thinking skills through the study of literature, linguistics, translation, creative writing, and cultural studies. A Spanish BA with experiences in those areas, then, is great preparation for careers in law, business, education, and the many health professions.
